

GAGOSIAN

---

Extended through August 23, 2019

MICHAEL CRAIG-MARTIN

Sculpture

Opening reception: Thursday, May 30, 6–8pm

May 31–August 3, 2019

6–24 Britannia Street, London

Michael Craig-Martin, Safety Pin (blue), 2019, powder-coated steel, 122 7/8 × 128 × 1 inches (312 × 325 × 2.5 cm) © Michael Craig-Martin. Photo: Lucy Dawkins

---

May 3, 2019

I have always thought everything important is right in front of you.

—Michael Craig-Martin

Gagosian is pleased to present new works by Michael Craig-Martin. This is the first time his sculptures have been shown indoors, and the first time they have been exhibited as a group in London.

Among the leading generation of British Conceptual artists, Craig-Martin probes the relationship between objects and images, perception and reality, harnessing the unique human capacity to conjure ideas through symbols and signs.

Since his time at Yale University in the 1960s—where he studied alongside artists such as Chuck Close, Brice Marden, and Richard Serra—Craig-Martin has been building on a specific vocabulary of imagery based on common, everyday items. His early work used real objects to explore the nature of art and representation, illusion and belief. In the late 1970s he turned to making images of objects, beginning with simple and precise line drawings that have remained the foundation of his work. In the '90s, he began a series of large, site-specific painted installations that explored the physical and imaginary relationships between viewer, object, and space. Subsequently, he turned to painting, developing his hallmark style of bold black outlines surrounded by flat planes of bright, vivid colors.

This exhibition includes six new monumental sculptures in a medium that Craig-Martin has been exploring since 2011: powder-coated steel forms that describe everyday objects and appear like line drawings in the air. The first series was shown in the gardens of Chatsworth House in Derbyshire, England, in 2014, where the sculptures were sunk into the soil of the grounds. The new works in this exhibition depict various items both timeless—as in Fork and Knife (green and purple) (2019)—and distinctly contemporary, as in Headphones (magenta) (2019). These elegant, large sculptures leave it up to viewers to attach their own personal narrative histories to the objects portrayed.

Standing between three and four meters high, the installation allows visitors to walk under and around the structures, which are discreetly sunk into the concrete floor of the gallery. The sculptures' lines are suspended in the air at a grand scale that is both implausible with respect to the objects they signify and unexpected within the serene context of the gallery. The forms have an instant sensory, intellectual, and emotional impact; produced with exacting draftsmanship, they are placed so as to explore spatial relationships through the juxtaposition of color. Their colors—vibrant shades denoted in the works' titles—have a synthetic, man-made quality like that of Pop art and of the objects themselves. Slyly evocative in their simplicity, Craig-Martin's sculptures evoke the tangible experiences of everyday life while speaking to the symbolic potency and conceptual power that the represented objects hold.

Michael Craig-Martin was born in Dublin in 1941, and lives and works in London. Collections include the Museum of Modern Art, New York; Tate, London; Centre Pompidou, Paris; and Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofia, Madrid. Permanent large-scale installations are on view at Laban Dance Center, London (in collaboration with Herzog and de Meuron); European Investment Bank, Luxembourg; and Bloomberg Headquarters, London. Selected solo exhibitions include Works 1964–2006, Irish Museum of Modern Art, Dublin (2006); Signs of Life, Kunsthaus Bregenz, Austria (2006); Less Is Still More, Museum Haus Esters, Krefeld, Germany (2013); Michael Craig-Martin at Chatsworth, Chatsworth House, Derbyshire, England (2014); and Transience, Serpentine Galleries, London (2015–16).

#MichaelCraigMartin

---

Press

Bolton & Quinn

+44 20 7221 5000

Erica Bolton

erica@boltonquinn.com

Daisy Taylor

daisy@boltonquinn.com

Gagosian

+44 20 7495 1500

presslondon@gagosian.com