Though the acclaimed German artist has been prominently featured at major institutions worldwide for the past decade—recently her installations have been shown at the 56th Venice Biennale, the Garage Museum of Contemporary Art, and MoMA PS1’s summer exhibition in the Rockaways—she’s only now being shown in her first solo gallery exhibition in New York. Grosse’s show includes large-scale paintings created over the past year, done in her signature brilliant palette and spray-painted technique, as well as a monumental sculpture.
